EDMONTON BULLETIN, SEPT. 4, 1886.

THE TOWN SITE.

That Edmonton possesses one of the finest town sites in the North-West all our residents claim and visitors admit. At the same time it must be acknowledged that by the system or lack of system pursued in surveying it into blocks and lots its natural beauty and utility could not have been turned to less advantage. The site is comprised within a large irregular bend of the river and is about two miles in length by one in depth. The main portion is on the level of the general surface of the country about 200 feet above the river, while there are included three large flats only a few feet above high water mark. The stores, workshops, offices, dwellings, etc., naturally occupy the high ground, and mills, factories and other institutions requiring a large quantity of water or ready access to the river as naturally occupy the flats. The steamboat and ferry landings are of course also on the flats. The hill rises quite abruptly from the flats and river so that communication can only be had between the upper and lower parts of town by graded roads, which again can only be made where and as the lay of the land will admit. In laying out the western or H. B. part of the town no attention was paid to this fact and by the survey, were crossing lots prevented, access from the town to two of the flats the steamboat landing and the upper ferry would be rendered circuitous and difficult, inconvenience would be sustained and business injured accordingly. But if the H. B. survey has this disadvantage it has the advantage of long, wide, straight streets. While natural advantages or necessities are not taken into account it has no artificial disadvantages. As much cannot be said for the east end, which includes some eight or nine river claims belonging to different parties, on which are located the larger number of the buildings and business places and which include one of the flats with the mill, brickyard and lower ferry. Three of these properties have been surveyed into lots, one of them without regard to the plan of the two others and the three without regard to the H. B. plan. On each side of these the properties are still unsurveyed, and when they are may be cut up on still different principles. Main street, upon which the principal business of the town is done is very crooked and comparatively narrow and it has no direct access to the mill flat, while on the flat itself no road allowance gives access to the mill, brickyard, or ferry. It is evident that if business is to be done free access must be had to the river at both ends of town on the easiest possible grades, that short, narrow or crooked streets are a drawback to business and keep down the value of property, and that as the town is built up the evils now scarcely felt and therefore not noticed will become serious, while the fact of costly buildings having been erected and numerous lots sold at high prices will make the changes that in the end must be made cost out of all proportion to the cost of a re-survey of a part of the work already done, and the laying out of a few street allowances now. Patents have been received or are shortly expected for all the claims, and now before patents are issued for the lots already sold and before the remaining properties are surveyed is the time to act if needless expense, inconvenience and depreciation of property are to be avoided. The interests of all property-holders are the same in this matter, and there should be nothing to hinder at least those in the eastern part of town from coming together and settling on a general plan that would give a straight, wide Main street and a system of survey conforming as far as possible with that of the H. B. and to the natural features of the place as well.

A COUPLE of years ago the BULLETIN ventured to suggest that had our Indian commissioner been expressly engaged to raise disturbance among the Indians he could not have exerted himself more strongly, nor as events proved more successfully, in that behalf. The method of the department—for which he is responsible—in dealing with the new phase of the Indian question developed during the past and present summers—the desire of the Indians to leave the treaty—shows too clearly that he is not satisfied with the measure of success already achieved in that line. Last year the policy of the department, if it had a policy, was to expel from the treaty the Indians most deeply concerned in the rebellion and discharge as many more as desired to take scrip as half breeds. A considerable number availed themselves of the scrip privilege when the commission was on its rounds and a number more received their discharges at treaty time. When the commissioners arrived this season and the number of Indians desiring to leave the treaty had greatly increased a change of policy was decided upon, and all possible difficulties and delays were thrown in the way of the Indians in this vicinity getting scrip until they had been worked into a state of exasperation. Then a number were allowed it and others still refused, who went away threatening vengeance. At Victoria several families were granted scrip but at Lac la Biche, where a large number had received their discharges last fall the department would not allow them to get scrip and cancelled their discharges, afterwards relenting and granting scrip to a few out of the band. What effect such a method of doing business would have upon white people may be easily understood and the effect upon Indians is not likely to be any better. The department by first granting, then refusing and finally granting part of the scrip demanded has shown that it enters upon a policy without due consideration and abandons it without reasonable cause. Such conduct can only inspire the Indians with distrust, hatred or contempt, according to the injury which they feel they have received. It is of a piece with the method of conducting Indian affairs ever since the present commissioner took office: it is a disgrace to the country, has worked great injury in the past and is certain to work greater injury in the future the longer it is continued. The cause of the desire of the Indians to leave the treaty is no doubt a mystery to people at a distance who are led to suppose, according to the treaty, that they are supplied with cattle, implements and seed, and food in times of scarcity. In this district since the treaty was made matters have been nearing that point gradually, but have not yet reached it, while with the Indians remain the memory of how their efforts have been balked, their requests denied, the promises made to them broken and themselves allowed to starve in past years, so that although matters have improved they have no confidence in the good intentions of the department and desire to leave its control and take their chances. The Indians may have all the follies, faults and vices that ever were charged against them but to the last one however degraded they possess a quality that the department seems to have forgotten or is determined not to recognize, that they may be led but can't be driven; that they demand to be dealt with as men not as children, fools or beggars. The department has proceeded on the supposition that they are one or the other of these, hence the desire to throw off the departmental yoke.

LAC LA BICHE SCRIP.

The issue of half-breed scrip at Victoria and Lac la Biche has been completed. At Victoria some thirty were issued when the commissioners went down from Edmonton and five when they returned from Lac la Biche. Several families of former Saddle Lake Indians were included in the issue of scrip. These will leave the reserve and take claims at Egg Lake on the south side opposite Victoria. At Lac la Biche about 200 were issued and prices ranged from 55 to 72 cents on the dollar. Alloway, Morse and Adamson were the Winnipeg buyers, the former securing upwards of half the total issue. Besides these were Ad. McPherson and W. F. Breden of Calgary, and Norris & Carey, J. C. Cameron and others of Edmonton. Of these Norris & Carey and McPherson secured the lion's share. McPherson, Norris, McKinnon and Breden had horses for sale and sold out at good figures. A Ferland of Calgary had an outfit of goods which he sold to A. Hamelin, Lloyd & Connors sold out their stock and the H. B. Co. had a large tent on the payment ground near the mission where they did a rushing trade. There were several beer saloons on the ground but they did a slow business and there were very few drunks. Twelve police under Insp. Snyder were on hand to preserve order, but their duties were light. The payment occupied seven days, the rate of issue being from twenty to thirty a day. A number of Indians from Fort Pitt were present with discharges from the treaty entitling them to scrip, which they had received from the agent there, but scrip was refused them on the authority of Mr. Wadsworth, who was present, as the department had changed its policy in the matter after the discharges were granted. Most of these Indians were engaged in the rebellion of last summer. The greater portion of what is known as the Beaver Lake band, who are really half-breeds and who received their discharges from the treaty last fall, were also refused scrip, and told that they must remain in the treaty. They were very wrathful at this, and a number of them remarked that whether they got scrip or not they were tired of being humbugged under the treaty and would have no more of it. At last on representations being made in their favor some four or five families of the band were allowed scrip. Several half-breeds residing outside the limits of treaty six, the northern limit of which crosses the lake, were refused scrip, as the issue was confined to the area covered by the treaties. When the commissioners left for Victoria the Fort Pitt Indians started for home overland to have another talk with the commissioners there. A large number of the Pitt Indians were struck off the lists by the assistant commissioner last fall as a punishment for their connection with the rebellion. As they are now pardoned for that and all disabilities removed, and they do not desire to re-enter the treaty, they demand scrip in extinguishment of their share of the Indian title. The commissioners took boat from Victoria to Pitt, and were followed by Messrs. Alloway, Adamson and Morse, scrip buyers. Most of the Edmonton parties who attended the issue have returned, but some have not yet arrived. The police have returned.

JOHN DOUGALL, founder and proprietor of the Montreal Witness and New York Witness, died suddenly at Flushing, Long Island, New York state on August 19th. He was born in Paisley, Scotland on July 8th, 1808; came to Canada in 1826 in charge of a consignment of shawls and other goods; became editor of the Montreal Canada Temperance Advocate in 1832; was married in 1840; started the Montreal Weekly Witness in 1846 and the daily in 1860; started the New York Daily Witness in 1871, which had to be given up in 1878, but continued the New York Weekly Witness up to the time of his death. He leaves six children, two sons and four daughters. His elder son J. R. Dougall conducts the Montreal Witness and his younger J. D. Dougall the New York Witness. Mrs. Dougall died in 1883. The Montreal Star says of him: "He was a man of earnest convictions, consistent purpose and could not be swayed from what he held to be the truth. In journalism his aim was high and it is safe to say that but few Canadian journalists, if any, have done more good than he has. He naturally made enemies, as he was always aggressive for what he thought right, and battled all his life long for temperance, truth and religion, opposing all subterfuges and underhand dealings. He strove in every way to advance church interests and make the precepts of the gospel part of the daily life of his readers. He was in fact the Livingstone of Canadian journalism, a missionary for the young and for the old of the cities. His salient characteristics were honesty, fearlessness and consistency. His record is a noble one and was marked with charitable deeds, strict attention to duty and a devotion to his trust almost sacred."

MINISTER OF CUSTOMS BOWELL and Minister of Marine Foster passed through Calgary for the coast on August 15th. They will remain on the coast about a week. The number of lighthouses and buoys on the coast is to be increased, owing to the increased traffic.

LOCAL.

The Medicine Hat Times mentions that an Indian recently found a herd of eighteen buffalo near that town and killed two bulls and two cows.

The Medicine Hat Times hints that the present to retiring C. P. R. Superintendent Egan was raised rather by compulsion than spontaneity among the employees of the road. The lowest assessment was $5 per man, and that or nothing was demanded.

GARNETT, the man arrested for the Prince Albert mail robbery, came to the North-West last year from near London, Ont., with the 7th battalion. He bears a good reputation. He admits being in the vicinity of Humboldt at the time of the robbery but says he was looking for land.

The land board decision by which four chains of the claim on the south side of the river awarded by M. Deane to L. Gurneau was awarded to J. Walter has been agreed to by Gurneau and J. St. G. Jellett is now surveying the new line. Two acres of the strip surrounding the Roman Catholic church building is retained by the church.

AN addition to St. Joachim's R. C. church was completed on Saturday last. It consists of a wing 20 x 30 on the west side of the building, with refitting in the original building to give a length of chapel of 55 feet with arched ceiling twenty feet high. The addition is finished with dressed lumber inside and out. The seats are not yet furnished but will be in a few weeks and there will then be seating capacity for 200 persons. A new altar will be in position in a short time. The addition is balloon frame and cost $1,000; A. F. De-gagne, contractor. The opening religious ceremonies were held on August 15th by Rev. Pere Lestanc, and were largely attended.

J. HETHERINGTON and R. Cenkrute, former residents of Edmonton, made a trip by skiff this spring down the Red Deer from the Bow river trail crossing to the mouth and then up the South Branch to Medicine Hat. The voyage down the Red Deer occupied nine days, but included stoppages to climb the high banks and view the country, most of which was very attractive, especially for grazing purposes. The voyage up the South Branch was at a slower rate and when within forty miles of the Hat they abandoned their boat and walked in. The river is very crooked and its banks are infested with rattlesnakes, while the country on each side is of no use except for grazing.

P. CAMPBELL, the driver of the stage which was robbed and who brought in Monday's stage says the account of the robbery published in the BULLETIN was substantially correct. One of the robbers was a tall man, the other short. Both wore overalls and pieces of a union jack over their faces. They were not unnecessarily rough or uncivil, but kept their guns ready for business. They handled the watches of the party—Burns' was a gold one—but did not take any of them. They also saw cheques in some of the pocket books and vouchers in letters that they opened but did not molest any of them. In going away they drove the stage horses about three and a half miles off the trail to where they had left their own. The horses were recovered the same day and the stage was delayed only about two and a half hours. The overalls and masks used by the robbers were found near the same place, one suit having been buried under the foot of a huge rock and the other left on the ground. On the arrival of the stage at Calgary active search was at once instituted by the police for two well-known characters who answered to the description of the robbers, and who were seen and spoken to on the previous Saturday not far from where the robbery was committed. The robbers did not find the registered mailsacks but tore open a few ordinary letters, in which they found nothing. A registered letter was exposed at the time, but they did not notice it. Fifty-nine dollars of the money taken from Campbell was his own.
